Galapagos on your Bucket List?

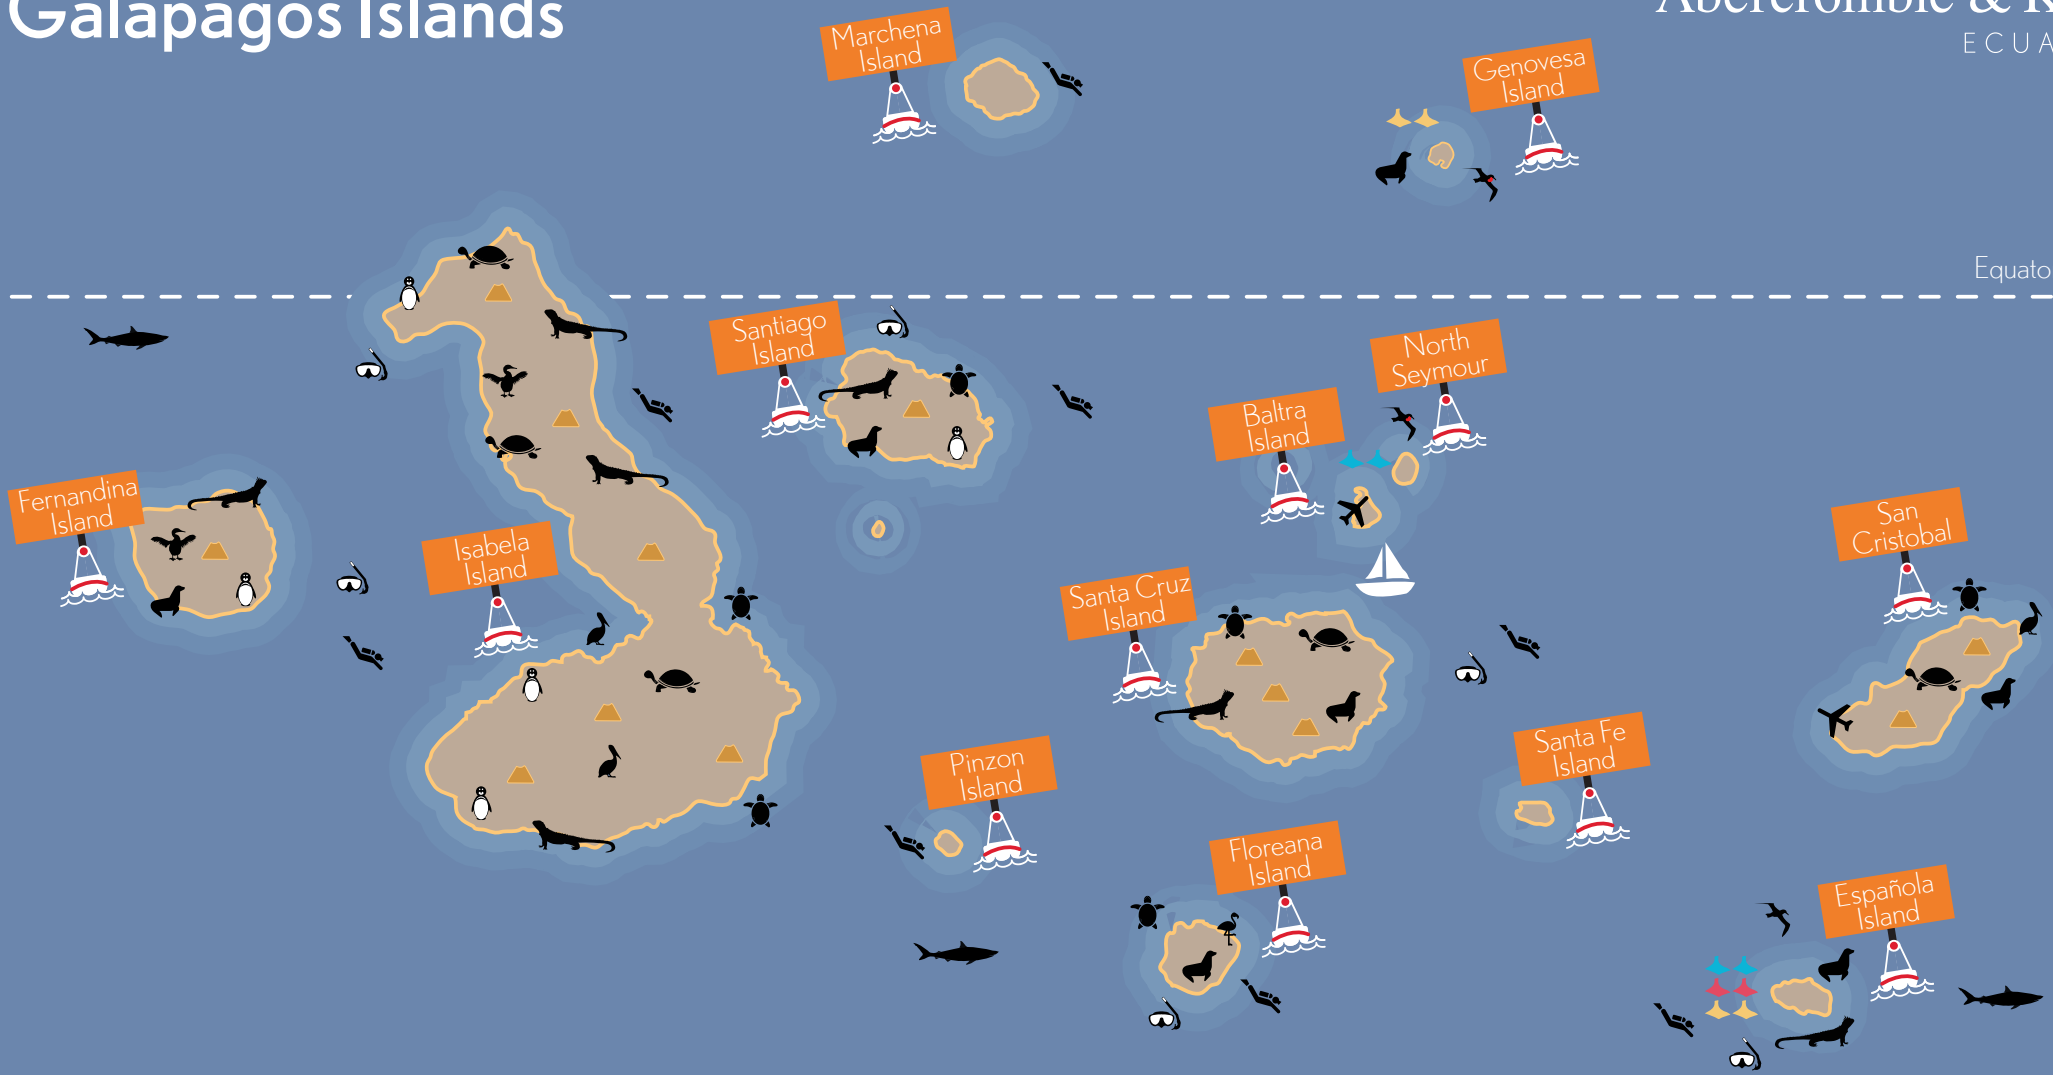

This Archipelago, 1000 kilometers (600 miles) off Ecuador's coast, was created by undersea volcanic activity millions of years ago, and comprises 13 major islands, 6 small ones, protected as one large National Park. In 1835, English Naturalist Charles Darwin visited the islands and this "living laboratory" inspired his writings on the Theory of Evolution. Many endemic animals have developed into endemic species only found here, and because they have never experienced people as predators, they show no fear towards humans.

Here at A&K Ecuador, we recommend the Galapagos Islands be at the top of your list! Watch sea lion mothers feed their newborns, meet the only penguin species who live north of the equator and admire the peaceful starlit skies. The Galapagos is also a great location for children as they have the opportunity to disconnect from technology and learn all about nature as they become amateur photographers or snorkel in the sea. From surreal landscapes to exciting adventures and the opportunity to embrace the finest aspects of Mother Nature, you can ensure that a visit to the Galapagos will be a trip of a lifetime.
